

CERTIFICATION BODIES

A learning path to your organisation's award.

Give candidates one place to prepare, practise and complete the courses your award requires. Your organisation sets the standard, decides what counts towards the award and issues the certificate in its own name.

Build the route to your award

Start with your published award criteria. Work backwards to the courses, practice tasks and evidence a candidate needs.

ACADEMY FEATURE	HOW YOU CAN USE IT
Academy branding	Present the programme and its requirements under the identity candidates recognise as the issuer.
Certification learning paths	Group the required courses into a multi-course path. Candidates can see how the preparation fits together.
Resources & assessments	Place reference material beside the cases, quizzes and assignments that practise the assessed skills.
Course discussions & Q&A	Give candidates a place to discuss practice cases and ask instructors to clarify the programme standard.
Progress reporting	Review course progress alongside the evidence your organisation requires for an award decision.
Branded certificates	Recognise course completion under your brand. Your organisation determines the requirements for its qualification.

Define what completion means

Explain which activities are preparation, which count towards assessment and who makes the award decision. Candidates should know this before enrolling.

A foundation award for new members

An association prepares members to conduct an audit. Its foundation path covers planning, gathering evidence and writing findings. The association sets the assessment criteria.

Independent preparation

Candidates study sample records at their own pace and practise matching a finding to its evidence.

Instructor-led clinic

A facilitator discusses a practice case with the group. Candidates then submit an individual assessment using a fresh set of records.

A QUESTION FROM THE PRACTICE CASE

Candidate	“Can I write that the process failed if I only saw one incomplete record?”
Peer	“I would describe exactly what the record shows.”
Instructor	“Separate the observation from the conclusion. Then identify what else you would check.”

The association reviews the required evidence against its criteria and decides which candidates earn its foundation certificate.
